OVERVIEW

Andharban Jungle Trek

The Andharban trek is a popular monsoon trek located in the Pimpri region of Maharashtra. It is known for its dark dense forest and offers a refreshing and beautiful experience for trekkers. During the monsoon season, the trek is especially enchanting, with lush green grass, dense vegetation, and gushing waterfalls. As you embark on the trek, you will walk through nature trails deep into the jungle, surrounded by the sounds of rustling leaves, chirping birds, buzzing insects, and the soothing sound of waterfalls. The fog-covered jungle adds to the mysterious ambiance of the trek. The views along the way include the Kundalika Valley, mesmerizing streams, and majestic waterfalls. The trek takes you on a ridge with breathtaking views of the Kundalika Valley, Bhira Dam, and the Tamhini Ghat mountain ranges. Andharban is known for its diverse flora and fauna. Trekkers can encounter unique species of birds such as the Jacobin cuckoo, the Malabar whistling thrush, dwarf kingfishers, and minivets. It is truly a paradise for backpackers and nature lovers. One of the unique aspects of the Andharban trek is that it is a gradual descent trek, unlike many other treks in the Sahyadri range. The trek starts at an elevation of about 2100 feet and gradually descends towards Bhira Dam. The trail takes you through the shade of evergreen trees, creating a dimmer and darker atmosphere as you progress. Throughout the trek, you will encounter three major river streams, which may require the assistance of a rope or human chain, especially during heavy rainfall. After walking through the dense forest, you will reach the remote village of Hirdi, where you can arrange for food from the locals and take a refreshment break or have lunch. From Hirdi, you will descend towards the Konkan route, heading towards Bhira. The second half of the trek is relatively shorter and offers scenic views of the backwaters of Bhira Dam. The Andharban trek is a unique and memorable experience, offering trekkers the opportunity to explore a dark forest, witness stunning landscapes, and immerse themselves in the beauty of nature. It is particularly popular during the monsoon season when the surroundings come alive with vibrant greenery and cascading waterfalls.
